Considerations as you review your course recommendations:

your teachers considered many factors when determining their recommendations for you and we encourage you to follow their recommendations. If you have any questions about your recommendation, we encourage you to talk to your current teacher in that department.

your recommended courses are subject to change if your academic work for the last part of the school year changes significantly you do not need to be recommended for most elective courses (but some have prerequisites)

Considerations as you request courses:

consider not just each individual course, but your overall load try to have a sense of balance and perspective in your life, but also appropriately challenge yourself select coursework that will engage you intellectually as well as position you to meet your goals for college matriculation and beyond. Typically, colleges are expecting that you have challenged yourself with the curriculum available to you while still maintaining strong grades.

seriously consider the total number of Honors, AP, and IB courses you request

(requesting a course for which you were NOT recommended will trigger the relevant department to consider your request)
